

COX AND McLAUGHLIN.

Over twenty years ago Jerome B. Cox did some contract work for Charles McLaughlin. The price of the service was nearly $100,000. McLaughlin refused to pay, not because he did not owe the money, but because he thought he could worry Cox in the Courts and defer the payment until Cox would accept part payment as a compromise.

Cox sought redress in the Courts. He was awarded judgment full amount by a jury. It was appealed to the Supreme Court on a technicality and ordered back for a new trial.

Again Cox won and again it was appealed and again sent back.

So this farce of justice, thus depriving a man of his legal rights for years went on until Cox driven to the verge of starvation by his law suits called on McLaughlin and made a personal demand for justice.

McLaughlin met him with sneers and Cox drawing a revolver shot McLaughlin dead.

It was undoubtedly a murder, but every man who knew the circumstances said that McLaughlin got just what he deserved and Cox was acquitted.

The other day the Supreme Court of California confirmed the decision of the Lower Court and Cox got judgment of $98,220 with interest for over twenty years.

All this time he had justice on his side but a crowd of owlish judicial hair splitters on the bench have stood between Cox and his rights for nearly a quarter of a century.

Give the Vaqueros a Chance.

Mr. R. L. Fulton has made a suggestion to the Directors of the Nevada State Fair that the Directors of our own District Fair might adopt the advantage. The proposition is the rodeoing of a few range cattle, and the riding of range horses. The cattle and horse ranges of the West are distinctively American institutions, original and inimitable. The crack riders of other countries would be as much at sea on a bucking bronco as a sailor would be in a balloon, and yet not one in a hundred, even in Nevada has ever seen any range riding. It would be done by cutting one animal at a time, and the instant it left the band the horseman on deck would take after it. The time it would take him to lasso it, throw it down and tie it, would be the time for others to beat, as they in turn have a trial. The "bronco busting" as the boys call it, could be done on a speed ring, although the other trials would need the large ground in the center. A few wild horses could be provided, and there are dozens of boys in this State ready to ride anything that has four legs, on the shortest notice. There will be no way to try the degrees of skill, perhaps, so it would have to be arranged to pay so much apiece. The horses would be blinded, saddled and bridled as part of the exhibition, and it would be exciting enough for any one.—Inyo Independent.

—Senator Ingalls made a scathing review of the political record of Vorhees in the Senate. He told so much truth and rammed it down so hard that Vorhees could make no other reply than call Ingalls a "liar" and "dirty dog," all of which shows that Vorhees had the worst of the debate, and could only resort to the tactics of an ordinary blackguard to reply. A United States Senator makes a sorry spectacle of himself when he resorts to vernacular of the bar room and cock pit.

—Carl Schurz declared at the banquet given him in Berlin that he loved this country as a bride. The country doesn't reciprocate his affection, as a Mugwump is a political hermaphrodite, not calculated to inspire any warm passion.—S. F. Chronicle.

—The APPEAL hopes to see no chestnuts in the Republican State Platform this Fall. Let us not "point with pride" or "view with alarm" to everything in sight.
